City Schools To Open September 16

Several Changes In Faculty From Preceding Year

Superintendent Paisley Gives List of Faculty and Assignments.

MORE MEN TEACHERS

Male Members of Faculty More Numerous Than Formerly.

The Hope public schools will open, as the usual custom, on Monday morning, September 16.

The Superintendent's office has been moved back to the Oglesby school building. Mr. Paisley will be in that office every day except Saturday and Sunday on and after September 1. Children who have never attended any of the Hope schools must come to this office and secure permit. No permit will be given unless the pupil shows evidence of successful vaccination against smallpox, and is six years old, or will be six within the first six weeks of the school year. Beginners in the first grade must enter school during the first two weeks of the term.

Owing to the over crowded condition at the Junior high school during last year the ninth grade will be transferred to the Senior high building. The grade will occupy the two rooms formerly occupied by Miss Allen and Mrs. Taylor. Miss Allen and Mrs. Taylor will have their pupils (first, second and half of the third) in the recently built school on the Garland grounds.

Miss Henry will be in her office at Garland high for classification of pupils of the four upper grades on and after September 1. The seventh and eighth grade pupils will meet their principal at the Junior high school on Thursday and Friday, September 12 and 13.

The pupils of Oglesby and Brookwood will meet their teachers at the school building on Friday, September 13, at nine o'clock for classification and book lists. Garland primary pupils will meet their teachers at the same time at their school.

The pupils of the negro school will meet their teachers at their school on Friday morning, September 13, at nine o'clock. Negro children must have permits from the superintendent before they can be enrolled in school.

The teaching force has had some changes on account of marriages and resignations. Miss Henry will have charge of Senior high with its four grades. Mr. Paul Hinnant will be principal of the Junior high school with only the seventh and eighth grades. Mrs. Cecil Parker, principal at Oglesby, with six grades.

Mrs. C. L. Renfro, principal at Brookwood, with six grades. Henry Yenger, principal at negro high school. Prof. Yenger is also principal of Rosenwald school.

Miss Henry is also principal of the Garland primary school. The schools are to have five men teaching this year. The officials are glad to have more men. Heretofore it has been impossible to secure men, but this year conditions have changed somewhat.

The teachers will have the first teachers meeting at nine o'clock, September 11, at the Junior high school building.

Negro teachers at Shover Springs high school at one o'clock, September 11. The superintendent will attend and have charge of these meetings.

The teachers of the several schools are as follows: D. L. Paisley, Supt. Senior high school, Beryl Henry, principal; Ernestine Allman, Caroline Clark, Elizabeth Harrison, Martha Lee, Eusel Coleman, C. C. Reynolds, Carol Hinesley, Levy S. Pryor, Mrs. Dean, Elizabeth Doane, Mrs. Henry Taylor, Lulu Allen.

Junior high school, Paul Hinnant, principal, Mrs. T. R. Billingsley, Mamie B. Holt, Grace Hudson, Mable Vick, Cornelia Whitehurst.

Oglesby school, Mrs. Parker, principal, Mabel Ehrbridge (half day), Volvie Reed, Vivian Bennett, Mrs. Theo. Wilt, Mrs. George Green, Bessie Green, Nellie Porter.

Harold Ward, 29, Youngest School Official, Is Dead

Dean of El Dorado Junior College Took Sudden Turn for the Worse.

OPERATED ON HERE

Young Schoolman Stricken On Summer Visit With Hope Family.

BULLETIN

Harold E. Ward died at 12:45 o'clock this afternoon.

The young El Dorado schoolman, only 29, began sinking late yesterday, after physicians had hoped he would be able to offset the effects of appendix poisoning which had set in several months prior to his operation last week.

His condition, obviously critical this morning, grew rapidly worse, and he died soon after noon.

Harold E. Ward, 29, dean of the Junior college and principal of the High School, at El Dorado, is in an extremely critical condition at Josephine Cannon hospital here following an operation for appendicitis some weeks ago.

Hospital attendants are doubtful whether he will survive through the day. Mr. Ward was stricken with a poisoned appendix while visiting his wife's father, Dr. G. E. Cannon and family, and an operation became necessary last Thursday. The operation was declared successful, but a poisoned condition of several months standing had lowered the patient's vitality, and last night there was a sudden unexpected turn for the worse.

Mr. Ward's own family was called hurriedly from Fort Worth, Texas, and friends and school associates at El Dorado were notified.

Mr. Ward is the youngest school executive in a major city in the state, and is widely known among Arkansas educators. He is given much of the credit for founding El Dorado Junior College, which he has headed as dean ever since its establishment several years ago.

During the years of most rapid constructive work in public education throughout the South Arkansas oil fields, following their development in 1921-25, Mr. Ward played a prominent role, helping to bring high school and junior college facilities at El Dorado, within reach of the rural and oil field population.

He was a major factor in the consolidation of school districts by which Union county's large school revenues were more evenly distributed among the entire population.

Corporations Fail Pay Franchise Tax

List of More Than 1,000 Certified To Attorney General.

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 22.—(AP)—State auditor J. Oscar Humphrey today certified to attorney general Norwood a list of 1,214 domestic and foreign corporations for failure to pay franchise tax to the state by August 10, the time limit.

More than $100,000 in taxes is involved. If the state collects, with a 25 per cent penalty added, it will mean more than $125,000 additional revenue.

In the list there are 31 banks, 282 domestic corporations, 192 foreign corporations, eight mortgage loan companies and 20 insurance companies.

Congressman Parks Laughs Last As Automobile Mechanics Face Charges

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Congressman Tillman B. Parks, of Hope and Camden, apparently has the latest if not the last laugh over an auto repair bill. The congressman had Ray Robins and his employee, Miriam Henry arrested today on a grand larceny charge.

Henry, the information alleges, had been sent to Camden by Robins with orders to collect a re-

If It's Cotton You Spoke About, Just Imagine A Field Full of These Stalks

Not discussing today boss cotton stalks, but talking about some mighty close kin of the boss, your attention is respectfully referred to one brought in Wednesday afternoon by G. W. Schooley, one of Hempstead county's good citizens living three miles northwest of Hope.

"I can't beat Mr. Lowthorp's 218," Mr. Schooley said, "but at that here's a stalk worth looking at." And it was! For it carried a load of 173 bolls and forms, of which 93 were bolls fully matured—and the stalk was putting on fruitage for it carried six white blossoms.

No special culture methods were applied to the growth. As with the Lowthorp stalk it was just one in the field, but if Mr. Schooley has many acres of it the English cotton mills will have to settle that strike and get going to care for the production.

Not one of the forms on the stalk had ever been touched by a boll weevil, Mr. Schooley saying the section around him, where the cotton was dusted being peculiarly free from the ravages of the pest.

Roads and Crops Are Needing Rain

Dense Clouds of Dust Make Auto Travel More or Less A Nuisance.

Not alone do crops in this section need rain, but highways are needing it equally as bad. Gravel and dirt surfaces are just streaks of dust, augmented by each passing vehicle and the forming of dust holes in the road makes riding a bit bumpy.

Melon and truck growers say the continued dry weather cut production in those commodities a third short, while cotton men say the yield of the staple in the county, it is said, would be aided by a rain, while the older growth, or most of it, won't do any more growing.

Police Chief Kills Two With Shotgun Double Killing Follows An Effort To Search Car for Whiskey.

WEST FRA KLIN, Ill., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Earl Krieger and Albert McDonald, were shot to death by police chief LeRoy Fisk here late last night after the chief and patrolman Nipper had attempted to stop the car to search for liquor.

Krieger is said to have fired first. Fisk returned the fire, shooting four times with a sawed-off shotgun, hitting both men in the head and killing them instantly.

Fisk is placed under technical arrest and is being held in jail at Belton today.

Youth Injured By Flying Timber

Explosion Hurls Bit of Wood Against Head of Worker.

SEARCY, Ark., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Milton Lee, 18, of Conway is in a serious condition in a hospital here as a result of being struck on the head with a flying bit of timber today at a site near where stumps were being blasted from a right-of-way.

The signal was given to run when the dynamite was lighted but Lee stumbled and fell, being struck by the timber as he was struggling to get up.

Losses Fingers In Factory Accident Wednesday

Miss Lorene Ellis is suffering a mutilated hand Wednesday afternoon in an accident at the local basket factory. She was relieving some one on the machine temporarily when in some way her hand was drawn against a saw.

The wound was treated at a local hospital and today the victim is resting as well as could be expected.

CAR TURNED TURTLE

Accident Occurred Early Today At Curve On Hugo Highway.

HUGO, Okla., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Jack Mangill, of McAlester, Okla., United States Commissioner, was killed and Crockett Lee, United States Marshal, also of McAlester was seriously hurt when their auto skidded at a curve in the road near here early today. Two women passengers in the car were reported uninjured.

The party was en route to Fort Smith and were making good time when the accident happened. The auto turned over three times after leaving the road, caught fire and was burned.

Lee has been for years in government service in Oklahoma and is known throughout the state. Mangill had not been an officer for a great length of time.

Arkansans Will View Industries

Honor Lincoln Tourists Detrain At St. Louis for Their First Stop

90 Arkansas Travelers Are Bound for Canadian Cities.

TO VIEW INDUSTRY

$15,000,000 In New Enterprises Invested In Southern Counties.

By GROVER A. ZINN

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22.—Stopping here this morning for a day of sightseeing the South Arkansas Chamber of Commerce third annual Industrial and Agricultural Tour prepared for its invasion of the North, and late tonight will head toward northern Indiana and Illinois, where the first industrial inspection tour will be made.

The group of approximately 90 was met at the station this morning by representatives of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and breakfast was served at the Claridge hotel by that organization.

Luther Ellison, manager of the trip introduced a number of prominent South Arkansas citizens, including A. G. Whidden of the Arkansas Power & Light Co., of Pine Bluff; Senator Pete McCall, of El Dorado, and Ed Graves, of Camden.

Following the meal a sight seeing tour of the city was made in rubberneck buses. The diversion for the afternoon was to consist of a ball game and for the evening a theater party.

The group will get down to work Friday morning when Mr. Ellison will begin conducting the daily school which promises to be of much value. The day will be spent in Danville, Ill., and Lafayette, Ind. There are more than 25 women and children in the party and 23 towns in Arkansas and one in Missouri are represented.

El Dorado has seven; Camden 11 and Hope three. The party was joined in St. Louis by Dr. C. H. Brough of Searcy, former Governor of Arkansas, veteran speaker who revels in spreading Arkansas good will.

The Southwest Arkansas Farm

The following is an excerpt from "The Farm Credit Situation in Southwestern Arkansas," University of Arkansas bulletin No. 237, prepared by B. M. Gile, which has just been received in Hope. The bulletin, which may be obtained free by writing Dean Dan T. Gray, College of Agriculture, Fayetteville, Ark., shows that the Hope-Magnolia district has probably made the greatest progress toward diversification of any cotton section in Arkansas. The Star is publishing an excerpt from the bulletin every day.

Farm Debt Situation

The data on volume of credit used by the farmers visited during the survey have been classified into short-term, or seasonal credit, and long-term credit. Short-term or seasonal credit, as the term is used here refers to loans obtained with the expectation that they will be repaid out of the current year's income. Credit of this sort is used to buy feed, fertilizer, supplies, labor and goods for human consumption.

The average amount of seasonal credit used in 1927 was $327 for owners and $204 for tenants. Although owners borrowed a larger total amount than did the tenants they borrowed less per acre of cotton. The owners borrowed on the average $9.30 per acre of cotton, while the tenant borrowed $9.97.

For the three years, 1925-27, the amount borrowed by tenants per acre of cotton remained about the same each year. For owners, however, the amount of credit per acre of cotton increased $1.33 in 1926 and $1.78 in 1927 over that of 1925.

The years of 1921 and 1925 were years of fair crop returns. The 1925 crop, however, was short in the level, so that it became necessary in the spring of 1926 to buy considerable feed.

Cotton Off in 1926

The cotton acreage in the cotton belt increased in 1926 and the yield was above normal. The increased production was followed by a drastic price decline. The spot price at Little Rock declined from 17.7 cents in August to 11.7 cents in December. The average price reduction for those months was 7 cents per pound, or $35 per bale under the 1925 price.

Although they were more fortunate in this respect than farmers in some other localities, their financial condition was more stringent than at the end of the previous year. In 1927 credit was generally extended to tenants on a more restricted basis than in 1926, partly because the owners had a lower cash carryover than in the previous year and because there was a tendency for the banks to scrutinize security more closely.

Forty-eight per cent of the owner-operators and 82 per cent of the cash and share tenants in the Hope-Magnolia district used seasonal credit in 1927. Farmers in this district were observed generally to be less dependent on seasonal credit than were the farmers in the Rison district. In 1926 only 15 per cent of the owners in the Hope-Magnolia district used seasonal credit as compared with 68 per cent in the Rison district.

Moreover, owner farmers there borrowed an average of $12 per acre of cotton as compared with $8.85 in 1926 in the Hope-Magnolia district. Farmers in the Hope-Magnolia district more frequently than in the Rison district have an income from butter, milk and eggs, which enables them in part to pay cash for their consumption goods during the crop season. Also some of them have other sources of summer income, such as returns from watermelons, cantaloupes and small amounts of truck.

City

Apply the revenues of the municipal power plant to develop the industrial and social resources of Hope.
More city pavement in 1929, and improved sanitary conditions in the alleys and business back-yards.
Support the Chamber of Commerce.

County

A county highway program providing for the construction of a minimum amount of all-weather road each year, to gradually reduce the dirt road mileage.
Political and economic support for every scientific agricultural program which offers practical benefits to Hempstead county's greatest industry.
Encourage farmer organizations, believing that co-operative effort is practical in the country as it is in town.

State

Continued progress on the state highway program.
Fearless tax reform, and a more efficient government through the budget system of expenditures.
Free Arkansas from the cattle tick.

The Local Banker

IN the closing paragraph of Mr. B. M. Gile's story of a Southwest Arkansas Farm, which The Star is re-printing from University of Arkansas bulletin No. 237, appears the following statement:

"The Banker's contribution consists of supplying capital and directing or advising its use so as to avoid losses and to increase the total income. As such an agency, the bank deserves the confidence of the community. The farmer in turn has the responsibility of using capital and other factors of production efficiently so as to make his own business a success as well as to meet his credit obligations promptly when farmers in one community can obtain credit and buy their supplies as cheaply as elsewhere, and at the same time show equal ability in the management of the farm business, they individually and collectively, will be able to compete with farmers elsewhere."

That, it seems to us, is the most important statement of Mr. Gile's survey in the southwestern counties. It means that the farmer, instead of being advanced sufficient credit to be "sold" to advantage, is banked in order to buy to advantage. It all depends upon the viewpoint—and the University survey tends to show that the business of Southwest Arkansas is coming more and more to look at it in the farmer's way.

The contribution of Hempstead county and all other local banks is a very large one. To them is due much of the credit for keeping abreast of the times, and upon them will resolve very largely the responsibility for developing the country along still more prosperous lines.

One thing we have observed is especially significant, in view of the federal government's effort to help national agriculture. That is the emphasis which is now being placed on marketing rather than increased production. It is a tremendous problem on a national scale; but locally the banks have rendered very great assistance simply by encouraging less production along established lines and more production of commodities whose market is better.

If you can't improve your market, you can sometimes change to another one—and that is one way of helping agriculture.

Sounds Like Irony

MRS. CALVIN COOLIDGE has turned to writing, following the lead of her illustrious husband and the no less illustrious opponent of Mr. Hoover in the last campaign.

Mrs. Coolidge is writing for the American Magazine, her husband for the Cosmopolitan, and Governor Smith for the Saturday Evening Post. The public talks more about the price per word than about the material itself. It is reported that Mr. Coolidge gets a dollar a word for his articles and that the Saturday Evening Post is paying Governor Smith two dollars a word. The size of Mrs. Coolidge's checks has received little publicity.

Mrs. Coolidge tells some things about herself and she also tells some things about her husband, little matters that the former president did not include in his early articles.

Mr. Coolidge failed to make clear just how solemnly he regarded his position as chief executive of the nation. His wife illustrates the point with a story. Young John Coolidge was expected for dinner one evening. It seems that he had a date and announced that he might be late and unable to dress. Mr. Coolidge said to John, "You will remember that you are dining at the table of the president of the United States and you will present yourself promptly and in proper attire."

Mrs. Coolidge illumines another interesting aspect of her husband's character revealed in the famous "choose to run" incident. The president gave the story to the reporters hours before he told his wife the news. She says she had no intimation whatever of his plans before a newspaperman let her in on the secret.

Mrs. Coolidge writes that she is very proud of the fact that her husband makes his important decisions without taking counsel with his wife. It is a rare husband that can rise on fortune's slope to the heights attained by Mr. Coolidge without asking the advice of his wife once in a while. It is a rare wife who takes pride in counting for so little in the life of her husband.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—After September 15 it will be all right with the government if we eat blue lamb chops, blue oysters, blue grapefruit blue candy or blue anything.

Blue will then be officially added to the list of food dye colors certified by the Department of Agriculture through its Food, Drug and Insecticide Administration.

The color will be known as Brilliant Blue FCF and was thoroughly tested before being pronounced harmless to health and otherwise suitable.

It will be used mostly in candy unless someone seeks to produce a few bizarre effects in other foods. The product is derived from coal tar. Heretofore candy manufacturers have sometimes used indigo, which has been approved, but indigo has had a tendency to fade.

Keith's theatre here, where Woodrow Wilson used to go regularly for his vaudeville, apparently is going to turn into an old landmark, of which Washington has so many. It has been dark for more than a year now and although the management has hoped either to open it again or rent it, neither hope has been realized.

Until it closed Keith's was the capital's most fashionable show house. Cabinet members and other officials patronized it much more frequently than any of the other better theatres here. It gained national celebrity through President Wilson's familiar presence in the presidential box.

Keith's succumbed to the disease which has ravaged vaudeville generally. It suspended soon after an enormous movie house opened near.

by to offer presentations, almost the equivalent of vaudeville, along with motion pictures. The talkies appear to have given another blow to any hope of reopening.

No other Washington theatre has taken its place as the principal local amusement center and President Hoover has his own talkies at the White House twice a week.

Perhaps the boys and girls elsewhere will be interested to learn that the boys and girls in Washington have seen Mrs. Lindbergh and agree that she is not only dainty and petite, but also a very pretty girl.

It seems that the former Anne Morrow takes a very poor picture—so poor as to make her look almost ordinary, whereas she really doesn't look like that at all. Observation reveals that she has lovely blue eyes, dark, well-shaped eyebrows, handsome teeth and an irresistible smile. And she made a hit with the boys and girls who counted themselves lucky to get a good look.

As a conscientious reporter, one probably also ought to report that Mrs. Lindbergh, when she stepped out of her husband's plane, wore an Alice blue ensemble, with coat and hat of some woolen material, printed silk frock to match, beige hose and black shoes with one strap.

A new dam across the Virgin river, near Littlefield, Ariz., was swept away by flood waters. Tough, but not dam tough!

Mosaic aerial map is to be made of 7,537 square miles of Mississippi valley flood region. There have been times when a Noachian map might have been made of this region.—Arkansas Gazette.

GREAT STAGE HIT IS NORMA SHEAR TALKIE

The fascinating Norma Shearer voice, which so captivated picture audiences in "The Trial of Mary Dugan," is to be heard on the screen of the Saenger theatre Friday and Saturday, where "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," her latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring production, is shown.

In the title role of Frederick Lonsdale's well-known stage play, a role created on the New York stage by the Claire, Miss Shearer clinches her hold on stellar talking screen honors. When she made her vocal debut in "Mary Dugan," she convinced critics that she more than merited the laudatory prophesies voiced by her producers, and in this, her second dialogue appearance, she amply retains their confidence.

Graf Departure Is Again Delayed

Unfavorable Weather Given As Cause for Postponement.

TOKYO, Aug. 22.—(AP)—The round-the-world air liner Graf Zeppelin, whose departure for Los Angeles was delayed by an accident as it was being walked out of the hangar early this morning was again held up tonight, this time by unfavorable winds.

The big ship was ready in its hangar, passengers all aboard, when Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander, shortly before midnight, announced cross-angle winds. There was still hope, however, that a shift in the wind would permit the Graf to get off with but little delay.

Soviet Completes Massing of Troops

Move Preliminary To Attack On Harbin To Enforce Demands.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(AP)—A Tokyo dispatch to the Daily Mail based upon official Japanese information, said Soviet Russia had completed mobilization of troops along the Manchurian frontier and would shortly begin a march on Harbin, provincial railroad center. The authority for the cablegram was Sir Percival Phillips, prominent British newspaper man, who said the Soviet union government had determined to force China to comply with her demands regarding the Chinese Eastern railway by warlike preparations, but without a formal declaration of war.

PEIPING, China, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Chinese authorities in Manchuria are massing troops to prevent Russians from crossing the Manchurian border. Manchurian railways today were crowded with troop trains moving toward the border where hostilities are expected to break with the beginning of the Russian advance on Harbin.

Swing Breaks and Girl Is Injured

Ruth Allen, Hurt When Limb To Which Swing Attached Breaks.

Ruth, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Allen, was seriously injured this morning in a rather peculiar manner.

In a neighbors yard the children had fiddled up a swing, fastening a rope to a limb of a tree and the other end to an old car casing. Ruth was swinging this morning when the limb broke, she falling with the broken limb casing across her breast. Her chest was badly bruised, an ankle severely sprained, and she was otherwise shaken up.

Woman To Hang In Canada for Murder

Both Woman and Accomplice Await Death On Same Scaffold.

MONTREAL, Canada, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Mary Viau, the 43-year-old mother of eight children, is in jail today at Huelque where she will hang tomorrow for the murder of her husband. She collapsed yesterday while being transferred from the Fulton street jail for women to Huelque where the hanging will occur.

Phil LeFevre, convicted in the case as the woman's accomplice, is in the same jail. He has been sentenced to hang, also, and is awaiting execution.

Milking Cows By Radio Is Labor-Saving Scheme

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 22.—They'll milk the cows by radio at the Dane county fair here Aug. 20 to 24—and that doesn't mean just to the accompaniment of radio music.

Radio-controlled automobiles will be piloted about the race track, pianos will be played, water will be pumped and other farm apparatus operated by radio waves. This will be the first radio control performance ever shown at a Wisconsin fair and is considered by fair officials as an even greater feature than a refueling demonstration to be given by two airplanes at the same fair.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Molly Burnham, charming play-wright, has a stormy scene with Bob Newton and Red Flynn. Bob has been drinking, and insists that he wants his baby. Molly took the child when Bob's wife died, and now she lives in mortal terror lest she take her away. She has grown to love little Rita as though she were her own child, and her whole life revolves about the baby.

After Molly gets rid of her quarrelsome callers, she writes a letter to her old sweetheart, Jack Wells, who is going to Italy. She humbly admits her love and longing, and says that she wishes they might go together.

Molly writes until breakfast time, when Red Flynn telephones to say that Mrs. Bulwer-Eaton, a middle-aged millionaire, sailed with Jack on the Leviathan. Then she destroys her letter.

Now Go On With the Story CHAPTER XXXVII

There were stories after that, about Jack and Mrs. Bulwer-Eaton. They said that in the Bulwer-Eaton mansion there was a golden bathtub, with cupids painted on it. And they said that a French maid bathed the pomegranates each morning in the gold tub.

There were rumors that the two were married, although no record could be found of a marriage license. It was whispered, also, that the old woman had adopted Jack, and would make him her sole heir.

European correspondents met the Leviathan when she docked at Liverpool. Mrs. Bulwer-Eaton was accompanied by her personal maid, a secretary, and two stalwart guards. With plenty of team work, the quarter fended off reporters, and Mrs. Bulwer-Eaton made a successful gateway.

Jack was not with her, and there was a rumor that he had gone ashore disguised as a steward.

Still, the couple was news. Cameramen bribed the servants, and gained entrance to the various Bulwer-Eaton homes. They photographed the million-dollar bathtub. And the statues of Cupid and Psyche in the old lady's boudoir.

Feature writers did articles on the mosaic floor in the ball room, comparing it to the art of Nero's banquet hall. They described, in great detail, the rug woven in Tunis for Mrs. Bulwer-Eaton, depicting the characters of a famous comic strip. They counted the cut crystal chandeliers, and the gold handles on the bureau drawers.

And, by the time they were through, Mister Wells had done pretty well by himself. And the other half thought he ought to be ashamed, and shouldn't be allowed to live.

Everybody read the news but Molly. She had given orders that every word about the infamous Bulwer-Eaton-Wells affair be destroyed before the papers were brought to her.

Once Red Flynn had tried to talk about it.

"That's an awful riding they're giving young Wells," he observed, meaning to sound quite casual.

Molly said nothing.

"It's a flock of lies and horse feathers, if you ask me," he vouchsafed.

Molly shrugged her shoulders. "I didn't ask you," she remarked pointedly.

"Well, I'm telling you then," he pursued untroubled. "If the old dame doesn't take them for a few millions in libel suits, she's a dumb jane. As for Wells—my gosh, they've taken him for an awful ride. And I ask you—what have they got on him? Nothing. Nothing at all. A man's got a right to go to Europe. He don't have to tell the cook-eyed world about it, does he?"

Molly faced him angrily. "It's about time you observed," she told him cuttingly, "that I'm not interested in Mrs. Bulwer-Eaton and her boy friends, if any."

Red whistled.

"But you don't really think—" he began.

"I don't think anything about it," she flashed. "And what's more, I don't want to. If I'd lived as long as you have, Red Flynn, and had as little tact—"

"Oh, all right," he soothed. "Don't get excited. Sweetness. By the way, speaking of boy friends, how's your little pal, Bob?"

"Butter wouldn't melt in his mouth," she admitted, "since he apologized for that dreadful night. He's nice as nice can be. He simply went down on his knees. I was thoroughly ashamed of himself. And he's tried so hard to be sweet since. It's rather pathetic."

Red looked annoyed.

"Once an egg, always an egg," he observed. "I'm glad, though, you never tried to go through on that custody business. No excuse for you pulling a low-down trick, because the other fellow's rotten."

"No," she admitted, "I thought that over afterward. I'll never try to take Rita away from him. I haven't the right. The thing that hurts, Red, is knowing that he has the right to take her from me. If Bob should marry again, he probably would want Rita."

"Probably," acknowledged Red. "The only way you can beat that, he added carelessly, "is marrying him yourself."

"I've thought of that," she said quietly.

"Molly! My God, are you crazy?" Red clutched her arm roughly.

"Don't!" she exclaimed. "You hurt. Can't you take a joke, stupid?"

"You didn't sound like you were joking, Molly."

"Well, I was. Anyhow why all the excitement?"

"I'd marry you myself," he declared, "rather than let that sap have you."

"Indeed?" She swept him a mocking little courtesy. "That's awfully good of you, Mister Flynn."

The next afternoon Bob called with a French primer for Rita. Molly meant never to be at home when he came. She was jealous of Bob, and it hurt her to see the comradely spirit that was developing between him and his daughter. She felt, also, that she could never—after that dreadful night—care for Bob again. Rita's French, under his tuition, had progressed remarkably. And the daily lessons were sweet to the child, as her bed-time hour with Molly. Tormented by her jealous demons, Molly kept away when the two were together, sparing herself the agony of watching them.

She despised herself for her jealousy, knowing it for a base and unworthy emotion. She read, in a doctor's book, that jealousy is a disease, with deadly ravages. She tried to cure herself of it, as she would of a physical sickness, prescribing various antidotes.

It was unhealthy for a woman to concentrate her emotions so entirely upon a child. In vain Molly sought absorption, first in work, and then in trivialities. But the fear of losing Rita filled her life to the exclusion of all things else. Like a great, unwholesome bogey, it stalked her day and night.

Then came the afternoon when she went to the nursery, and found Bob there. Rita was in the park, and was waiting for her.

Molly stopped on the threshold. "Oh," she said. "I didn't know you were here."

"You've been avoiding me, Molly," he accused.

"No, I haven't. What makes you think so? I've been awfully busy, that's all."

Molly hesitated. "I have it in my mind," she confessed, "to write a book. Something different. Quite unlike anything I've been mulling it over for days."

"A romance, I suppose?"

"A blighted romance," she said. He looked up quickly.

"Your own story?" he asked. But she shook her head, coloring so guiltily, he knew he had surmised correctly.

"For a girl who has everything in the world," he remarked, "you're a singularly unhappy person, Molly. You're young and charming. You've friends, and might have lovers. You're a child to cherish. A beautiful home, and plenty of money. What more could a woman ask?"

"What makes you think I'm unhappy?" she demanded.

"You've changed," he declared. "The old sparkle's gone. You're not gay, the way you used to be. You don't laugh so much. And you've the saddest smile in the world, Molly."

"Well," she said, "I'm not so young as I used to be. And I don't think I'm charming at all. I haven't any particular friends—just Red, and you—and Mr. Durbin, maybe. And I haven't any lover at all. Of course I adore Rita. But, after all, she's not mine. As for my beautiful home—why, it's nothing in the world but a rented flat. I don't own a stick of furniture in it. To have a home, Bob—a really, truly home—you have to have love. I guess—"

"Why don't you get married?" he interrupted.

"And who?" she asked, "wants to marry me?"

It was a tactless question, born of a moment's bantering. As soon as the words were out of her mouth, Molly regretted them.

Bob was standing now by Rita's crib, looking, not at Molly at all, but at the mad March hare.

"I do," he said, and raised his eyes to hers.

"Why, Bob!" she quavered. "It isn't," he admitted, "an exclusive desire on my part. There are plenty of men who would like to marry you. You'd be a rarely lovely wife, my dear. You are the sort of woman a man dreams about when he thinks of the woman whom he would most desire. For dream-girls are made of your sweetness, and tizzed with your flame—did you know that, Molly?

"You're the kind of girl—" "Bob!" she cried.

"Oh, I know, dear—I'm an awful nerve to ask you to marry me. I've given a couple of unpleasant exhibitions of just what kind of a chump I am. And it's darn preposterous to expect you to listen to me—"

But, after all, Molly, there are certain circumstances to be considered. I happen to be the father of a child whom you adore. If you should marry me, you would become Rita's mother. That ought to mean something to you."

She shook her head wildly. "But, Bob, I have Rita now. You wouldn't ever take her from me?"

"Rita is mine," he said. "Suppose, Molly, that you should marry someone else. Would you expect me to give up my child?"

"But I'm not going to marry anyone, Bob!"

"It isn't," he insisted, "a matter on which I can hazard any chances. Nearly everyone wants to marry, and almost everyone succeeds. If you marry, you would probably have children of your own."

"I'd love Rita most," she declared.

"But I couldn't let you have her," he protested. "You must believe I love my child, Molly."

"Why, of course you love her! Everybody loves her. My goodness, Bob, what are we talking about? Anybody's child—" She laughed nervously. "I'm sure I've no notion of getting married, or having a family, or anything of the sort."

"But you ought to. That's what the matter with you, Molly. Your life is incomplete. You need a husband. Children. Required love."

"Bob!" she appealed. "You make me sound like an old maid with a complex. Stop it!"

He put his arm around her awkwardly.

"Now listen to me, little girl. We've been friends for a long time, haven't we? We know each other pretty well."

She nodded, squirming uncomfortably.

"Well, I'm a fairly broad-minded sort of chap. I've stood back and watched you and Red Flynn, and I've kept my mouth shut. I believe that a girl should have enough experience to get a sane slant on love, exactly as men do. It gives them a better chance of happy marriage based on reasonable values."

"Sometimes, Molly, it's made me pretty sore. That night I came in, and found you in his arms—"

"Bob!" she cried.

"But that's all right," he went on. "If you hadn't played around a bit, the first man who broke through your guard to kiss you would have given you such a devastating thrill, you'd have thought it was love-for-life stuff. Now you know better than that. You know, for instance, that Jack Wells and Flynn can both thrill you—"

"See here!" Molly thrust him from her, and catching his coat lapels in both hands, held him. Searching his eyes with hers.

"You mustn't talk to me like that."

"Why not?" he demanded. "We might as well be honest with each other. Now listen, Molly—"

Is This Monkey Business?

There is no question that a victory of the Philadelphia Athletics in the American League pennant race this year would be popular with the customers. And the general impression might be gained that it would be a popular victory with the other clubs in the league who had been convinced that they couldn't win.

Some of the Yankee players have complained that they were getting all the bearing down in the league. They didn't try to give the impression that the other clubs were dying to the A's and working on them. But they did say that the opposing clubs saved their best pitchers to knock them off and that some of the opposing clubs didn't have their best pitchers ready when time came to work on the A's.

The Douch Angle Enters

But it has been learned from conversation with the ball players on the other ends that the Athletics will not end them into rhapsody if they win the pennant.

There is financial reason. The clubs that finish second and third will not get as much of a split of the world series money if it is played in Philadelphia. If the Cubs and the Yankees were to play part of the series in the Yank Stadium there might be a new record prize for the players who share in the receipts.

Another Angle Also

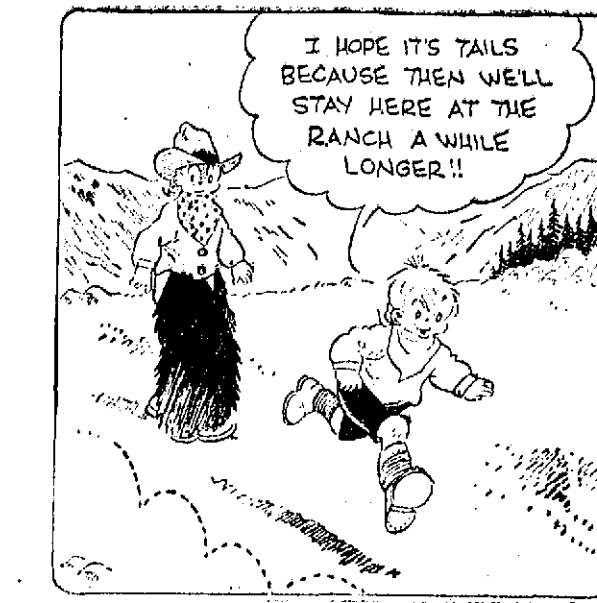

There is another reason also for the cool feeling that the other ball clubs have toward the Athletics. This was brought out in a convincing way a few days ago by the manager of an American League club who seldom has been known to make any kind of a critical remark about another ball club or ball players on other clubs.

The Athletics are a pain. "The Athletics," he said, "are

Grove and Bush Set Pace Toward Sizzling Series

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP)—There's always one pitcher on a club that stands out in the long fight for the pennant.

This year it is Gus Bush for the Cubs and Lefty Grove for the Athletics. They have contributed heavily to the most unexciting pair of pennant "races" in a decade.

Bush stands out because of the stirring pitching performances he has produced in not only leading his club but also the league.

Grove is in the forefront not only because of his won and lost rating but because of his colorful style.

Between the two, Bush and Grove had won 35 games and lost only five on August 20.

Bush topped his club with plenty to spare but was just a jump ahead of Burleigh Grimes for the highest league rating.

Grove had the best pitching percentage of the A's staff but was running second in the league ratings. Old Tom Zachary was out in front with nine victories and no defeats.

It is somewhat of a new experience for Bush to have the second highest average in the majors. Eighteen months ago he was just another pitcher. First indications of his climb came in 1928 when Mississippi Guy picked up 15 victories against six defeats. In three other seasons with the Cubs, the 25-year-old right hander pitched just ordinary ball. For the three years he won 19 and lost 22, which left him far short of the front ranks.

But Grove has been up there with the high winners. In three of the five seasons he has spent with the A's. That is why he can take several weeks to win that next game and without losing prestige.

Lefty has been a 20-game pitcher for two years. That is he pitched that mark in 1927 and 1928. The actual figures show he won 20 and lost 13 in 1927 and won 24 and lost eight in 1928 total this season.

They were picking him to capture 30 games until an early August slump put the blonde southpaw on the skids.

If that Chicago-Philadelphia world series does materialize, Lefty and Guy will be in there trying for their share of glory and they may make their bids no later than the first day of the championship program.

With six weeks to go Bush versus Grove is the easiest guess and probably the best for the opener.

under J. H. "Bo" Rowland, who predicts his squad will be equal to the task of retaining that title.

The Reddies will meet three teams considered above their class. They include the University of Arkansas, Mississippi A. & M., and Centenary College, Shreveport.

Each of those games will be played away from home.

Rowland said the toughest part of the schedule, however, viewed in the light of the team's record last year, will be with the Arkansas Tech team at Little Rock, and with Ouachita.

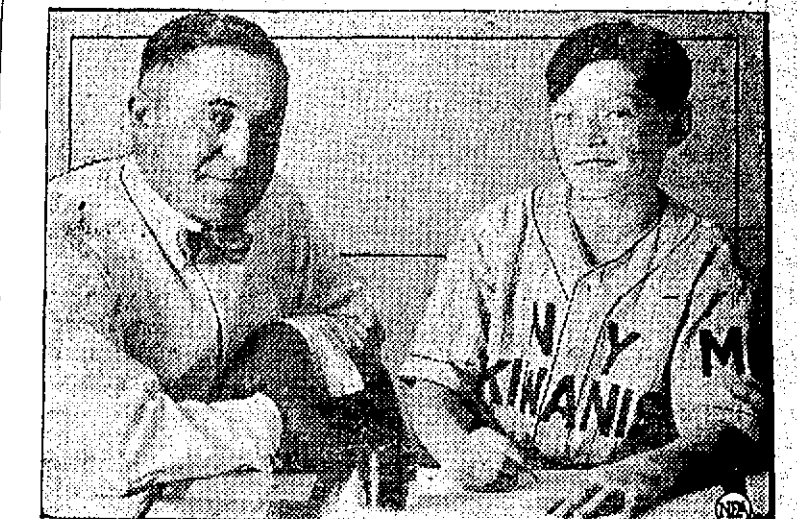

The Reddies schedule is as follows:

- September 28, Mississippi A. & M. at Starkville.
- October 5, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville.
- October 11, Little Rock College at Little Rock.
- October 18, Arkansas Tech at Little Rock.
- October 25, Hendrix-Henderson College, Arkadelphia.
- November 1, Texarkana Junior College at Arkadelphia.
- November 9, Centenary College, at Shreveport.
- November 15, College of the Ozarks, place as yet not determined.
- November 22, open.
- November 28, (Thanksgiving)—Ouachita College, at Arkadelphia.

Only 13, But He's a Big Leaguer

Gosh fellers, how'dja like to be "Red" Solomon? He's only 13 years old, but he's going to play with the Chicago Cubs. Here he is, right singing a contract in New York with Joe McCarthy, manager of the Cubs, making him the youngest player ever to get a berth in the big leagues. The youth's work as manager and third baseman of the champion New York junior Kiwanis team attracted McCarthy's attention.

Unwittingly, He Carries Nine-Foot Fishing Rod

LONDON, O., Aug. 22.—(A)—Samuel Trumper made a startling discovery the other day. For many years he walked the streets of this city and foreign countries with a nine-foot fishing rod in his hand and did not know it.

While Trumper was inspecting the fantastic figures on a handsome bamboo walking stick he purchased in China a number of years ago he heard a rattle. He investigated and found that a part of the ferrule was unscrewed, permitting two joints to come out of the cane and forming a magnificent nine-foot telescope fishing rod. Trumper resided in China for many years as the representative of an American tobacco company.

Reed Finds Contentment In Quiet Role of Lawyer

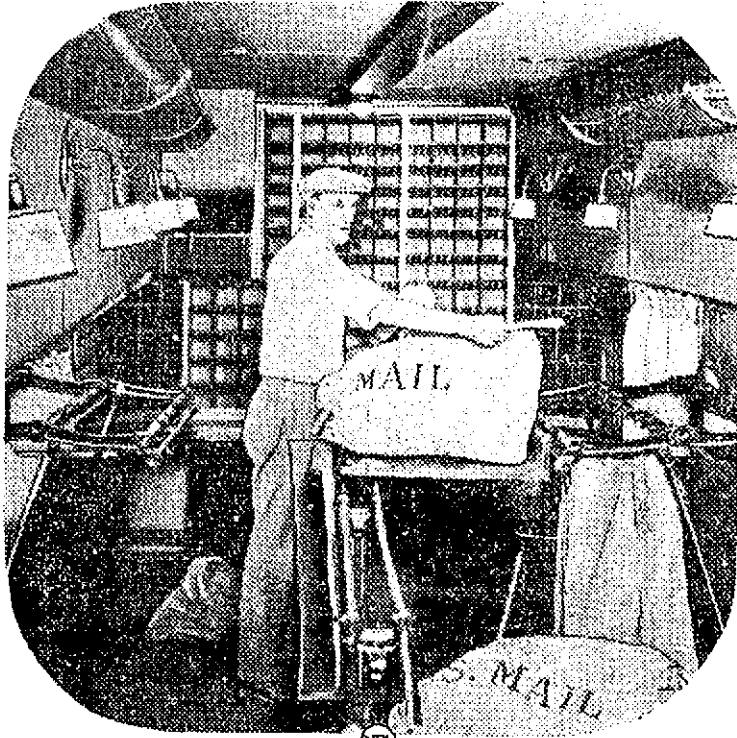

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 22.—The quiet of private life, after 35 years of political turmoil, has brought a new happiness and contentment to James A. Reed.

The former Missouri senator says he has retired, but they call him Kansas City's hardest working lawyer. He goes to work ahead of his office staff, slips out to a drug store counter for lunch, and frequently works late into the night preparing legal briefs.

Injured By Explosion While Doing Operation

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Aug. 22.—Dr. R. W. Gehres suffered severe burns when a tank of ether exploded while he was administering the sleep producing formula to a patient. He was unable to proceed with the case due to his injuries and another doctor was called. The patient was injured.

"Flying Postoffice" Is Next

This is how Uncle Sam's flying postoffices will look when clerks are carried on planes to sort airmail while the plane is en route. The Boeing Air Transport, operators of the San Francisco-Chicago route, is building a fleet of 18-passenger planes which can be converted into mail planes like this within 24 hours. The mail cabin is 19 1/2 feet long, five and one-half feet wide, and allows a clerk to stand upright while working. There is room for 280,000 letters.
